

67 TRAINS NEEDED TO HAUL TOBACCO SOLD BY POOL

Some idea of the magnitude of the deal by which the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company takes over practically all the holdings of the 1921 crop in the hands of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association may be gathered from figures given out by Warehouse Manager Robert E. Beatty, of the Lexington district.

Manager Beatty said that it would require 67 freight trains, of 50 cars each, to carry the 54,000,000 pounds sold, that the tobacco would fill 3,375 standard freight cars, and that, if the hogsheads containing it were placed end to end they would reach for a distance of more than fifty miles.

Official figures from the department of agriculture at Washington, received in Lexington, show that the burley crop of 1921, not counting the association sales, averaged nine cents a pound more than that of 1920, as it brought 22.3 cents a pound, as compared with 13.37 cents a pound for the 1920 crop. This was paid in spite of the fact that the 1921 crop was inferior to that of 1920. According to the department report the increase was due to the movement to market tobacco co-operatively.

It is no forecast of a happy marriage if the bride thinks she is giving up a lot in life.

Just History

In '78
The Colonial Dame
Spun her cloth
By Candle flame.

In 1860
In Crinoline bright,
She greeted her guests
By Coal Oil light.

And later on,
How time does pass
Her home was lit
By flickering Gas.

But the girl of to-day
Who wants her home bright,
Just presses a button
And has Electric light.

IN THE WRONG HOUSE

Local papers, as well as correspondents of the dailies, were unintentionally in error in the recently published notices of the death in Chicago, of John Gnadinger, Jr., formerly of Paris.

It was stated that the deceased's father, John Gnadinger, Sr., built the residence at the corner of Duncan avenue and Vine street, at present owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William G. Talbott, and T. Hart Talbott. It developed afterward that the house had been built by Col. John A. Prall, and later sold to Robert T. Davis, a son of former United States Senator Garrett Davis. Senator Davis owned and resided in the brick mansion on the hill opposite the Tenth street station of the Louisville & Nashville, now owned and occupied by James W. McClure, Jr. Robert Davis was a grandson of Robert Trimble, of Paris, a member of the United States Supreme Court. The bodies of Senator Garrett Davis and Judge Trimble are buried in the Paris Cemetery, with imposing granite shafts marking their last resting places. Robert Davis, was found dead in bed at the Duncan home by his son, Garrett ("Coot") Davis, who was sleeping with him.

GENERAL ROGER WILLIAMS JOINS BURLEY POOL

General Roger D. Williams, former adjutant general of Kentucky and an army officer in the Spanish-American and World wars, has signed a contract of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, declaring that he believed it had been demonstrated to the satisfaction of every reasonable man that the co-operative marketing of Burley tobacco is "the only way" to sell it.

"I think it is a good proposition," said General Williams, "and that every grower of burley tobacco ought to get in. I have been a little slow in signing myself, I will admit, but you can say that I am convinced that the Burley Association not only has done a great thing for all of us who grow tobacco, but that it has found the only right method of selling tobacco so as to eliminate the profits of speculators and others which rightfully belong to the producers themselves."

"The Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, to my mind, has clearly demonstrated the success of its system of marketing. I signed the contract as soon as it was presented to me by Albert T. Day, of the Association."

"The Burley tobacco growers generally should congratulate themselves on the personnel of their management. With such management, composed, as it is, of men who know tobacco thoroughly, with a loyal membership, which the Association has proved it has, and the confidence of the banking and business public, it is evident to me that it is time now for all growers of Burley tobacco to come into the Association."

TOOL CHEST FOUND IN BOAT SUNK 1863

A chest of tools from the steamer Alice Dean, which was sunk July 9, 1863, in the Ohio River near Mauckport, forty-five miles south of New Albany, by Gen. John H. Morgan, the Confederate cavalry leader, has been recovered from the sunken hull by rivermen of Mauckport.

Gen. Morgan used the Alice Dean to transport his troops across the Ohio River from Brandenburg, Ky., to make his famous raid in Southern Indiana and Ohio. After the crossing, Gen. Morgan burned the steamer. The sunken hull has lain in the sand near the mouth of Buck Creek since that time.

During the recent low stage of the river, Vincent Applegate and Marion and Norval Frank, of Mauckport, were exploring the hull, when they recovered a full chest of steamboat tools. The tools, which are of old design, are in a fairly good state of preservation, although they have been under the water for almost sixty years.

The hull has been a goal for relic hunters, and little now remains except the timbers.
